Built after the German annexation between 1871 and 1918, the Neustadt district tripled Strasbourg's surface area and made it a showcase for the German Empire. It is characterised by wide roads, imposing administrative buildings, affluent residential buildings and artfully designed landscaping.

19 PLACE DE LA RÉPUBLIQUE

The former Kaiserplatz, prettily lined with trees, is surrounded by majestic examples of this imperial architecture, such as the Palais du Rhin, the University Library and the National Theatre. At the centre stands the war memorial erected in 1936: it represents a mother with her two sons, one who died for France, and the other for Germany; a dramatic situation experienced by the Alsatians during both world wars.

20 THE ORANGERIE PARK

is a cool heaven in the heart of summer. Empress Josephine loved walking there when she stayed in the pavilion named after her. With the boats on the lake, the little zoo, the storks and the children's games, the park is a very popular place with the locals.
